The city is bigger than it was, and we really haven’t replaced all of the housing we lost in the ’70s. Andy Reicher, Executive Director of the Urban Homesteading Assistance Board (urban homesteading).

The city wanted to do something about the number of small apartments in the city, including the micro-unit fad. We interviewed an architect, Chat Travieso and students from the Academy of Urban Planning at the NYC Department of Housing Preservation and Development.

The micro-unit concept is an adaptation of housing development that’s bigger than it was, we lost in the ‘70s. Discussed by Architect PC, Office of Urban Homesteading.

There are zoning laws that are much greater than they were in the ‘70s. We’ve been having zoning problems again. Edited by Gabriela Amabile.

The reason why there aren’t more small apartments in the city is because there’s a much greater number of units that can be made in large buildings out of small spaces. Edited by Gabi Amabile.

The city wanted to do something about the number of small apartments in the city, including the micro-unit fad. We interviewed an architect, Chat Travieso and students from the Academy of Urban Planning at the NYC Department of Housing Preservation and Development.

The micro-unit concept is an adaptation of housing development that’s bigger than it was, we lost in the ‘70s. Discussed by Architect PC, Office of Urban Homesteading.

There are zoning laws that are much greater than they were in the ‘70s. We’ve been having zoning problems again. Edited by Gabriela Amabile.

The reason why there aren’t more small apartments in the city is because there’s a much greater number of units that can be made in large buildings out of small spaces. Edited by Gabi Amabile.

The city wanted to do something about the number of small apartments in the city, including the micro-unit fad. We interviewed an architect, Chat Travieso and students from the Academy of Urban Planning at the NYC Department of Housing Preservation and Development.

The micro-unit concept is an adaptation of housing development that’s bigger than it was, we lost in the ‘70s. Discussed by Architect PC, Office of Urban Homesteading.

There are zoning laws that are much greater than they were in the ‘70s. We’ve been having zoning problems again. Edited by Gabriela Amabile.

The reason why there aren’t more small apartments in the city is because there’s a much greater number of units that can be made in large buildings out of small spaces. Edited by Gabi Amabile.